An expanded set of scenarios for the Byzantine Empire, which covers the period from 10th to late 12th century. The new unit pack includes ten scenarios: • The first successful Byzantine reconquest of the peninsula of Anatolia, by Emperor Romanos III (1143). • The time of the battles of Bursa (1150) and Mersin (1172), at the borders of Anatolia and the Golden Horn. • The time of the campaigns of Alexios I Komnenos (1143-1155), in the West (Spain) and in the East (China). • The conquest of Bulgaria by Michael VIII, in the course of the war against Alexios II (1185). The siege of Scutari (1147), when the city was besieged by Alexios III. • The time of the military conflicts of Tsar Simeon II (1169-1179). The end of the war between the Romans and the Sicilians in 1185. The Latin conquest of the principality of Salerno (1182). The conquest of Thessaly by Venice in 1228. • The conquest of Albania by the Ottomans in 1443. • The loss of Corfu by the Venetians in 1460. The scenarios have been thoroughly reenacted and the new units have been implemented. There are also extra background sheets for the most important personalities. New features include: • more than 100 new characters and about 500 new families. • modified game units and new building options. • the possibility of creating holy orders (knights and bishops). • the possibility of being the first ruler of an empire, and the ability to compete in the Golden Horde, in the Grand Duchy of Moscow or in the Khanates of the Golden Horde. • the possibility of

What's included: The uniform colors pack is meant for people that don't like to see humanoids fight using 'perfect' colors, I use it mainly for my games. Play the game before buying it: Change Log May 31st, 2015 Following some requests, I included two brand new alternative maps in the download version. Namely the 'El Pobre Diablo' and the 'Guardado' maps. If you'd like to play theses, make sure to extract the two files 'ESC Games Parasite EL BALDONEGRO.DDF' and 'ESC Games Parasite GUARDADO.DDF' to the /myth/gametypes/ directory. February 5th, 2015 Now the pathfinding has been fixed, you can no longer reach the top of the cliff. You'll have to let your AI be your guide. October 10th, 2014 In an attempt to expand the combat system, I've added a character modifier interface. This allows each NPC, like in the base game, to modify the way they move and attack their opponents. To use it, simply select the NPC you wish to modify, and then press the Enter button to bring up the character modifier screen. At the time of the release of this mod. I have added only one modifier, and only on one character, the Al Commander. In the future, I'll add all the other possible modifiers, and probably more. The first character is the current holder of the 'AO' device, the 'Augmentation of Origin' device, an extremely powerful but dangerous device. So dangerous, in fact, that it's sometimes used as a suicide device. This modification includes a new concept, a fighting module which replaces the old default module. It has many things like auto aim, new ground units, a little faster, more units, and more features. When you have no fighting modules, the default module has a variable health. You can get back to 100% health by deploying a module in a system module, or by deploying a healing module on the same system. Since your combat modules are activated only when you have both shields and health, you can only take back 100% health by replacing them with a new one. This combat module has also a dashing module, which, just like in the base game, lets you move a system module. When you deploy a system

-- a very pretty, hand-drawn game in which vou scramble to survive Survival RPG: The Lost Treasure is a very pretty, hand-drawn game in which you scramble to survive Ah, Survival RPG. Remember those? You know. the video games that transported young minds to a prehistoric world of danger, peril and pastel colors? Everyone I know used to play them, and they remain perpetually trapped in my youth. They're the first thing that springs to mind whenever I hear the phrase'survival game.' I suppose that's because they were among the first to try and portray the danger and peril of living through a harsh-yet-sunny world, using paisley, unkempt characters and goofy characters to transport players to a world that resembles its own reflection. Survival RPG is just one of the most perfectSurvival games. Maybe it will come out on iPhone/iPod as well. Advertisement Anyway, The Lost Treasure is exactly that. It looks like it was done with a little more care than the cheaper Survival RPG, and the characters look quite a bit nicer (to be kind: they're still not Avatar-level), so it's a graphics-focused game. Let's have a look. First, you'll need to pick your class. You have three classes to choose from: Hunter: What do you hunt? The Hunter class hunts wild animals. Pioneer: Are vou brave? The Pioneer class can explore terrains, carry large loads and build dwellings. Tamer: Are you strong? The Tamer class can gain the trust of animals. These might seem somewhat boring, until you actually get into them, as you explore a world in which you encounter varied wildlife. including robots (who obey your every command, apparently). When you want to build a shelter (to hunt, pillage and relax) you simply select a nearby spot on the top of a hill. You place a cube on it and select either Hunter, Pioneer or Tamer. When you do this, your class will spend two-thirds of their health on the hill (that is, the hill will drain half your health). As you dig a hole to set up your shelter, you can set objects on your way up. You should let those objects pile up, as they accumulate to stuff into a box, and for some reason this adds supplies to you (this is, again, a bit of a mystery). So you'll usually

The Monster Melee is an old-school of actionadventure game (inspired by games like Evil Genius or Nethack). The hero is a character with "the gift of math", who traverses a procedurally generated environment, fighting monsters and collecting treasures along the way. The environment changes from time to time, and new monsters appear. The hero can obtain a wide array of items, ranging from weapons, special potions, armor, jewelry and potions. Each of these items has a numeric description, which needs to be interpreted and translated to real game mechanics. This means that even though the game is "old-school", we still have to make sure that new features will "fit" the old-school mechanic. The game is designed to be played in 60 minutes, for only one player. The source code of the game is available here for others to study and use. The demo starts the hero in a procedurally generated level. The demo does not vet include the puzzle aspects of the game, or any mechanics to make it a "complete" game. The game can be played with a keyboard, or with the gamepad the game came with. You can also choose to play the game with mouse and keyboard, with the gamepad like in the demo. The game is designed to be played with minimum of prerequisites: A reasonable C++/Qt and OpenGL/OpenGL ES knowledge, A fairly good understanding of principles of game design, A keyboard and an SD card. The game was started in 2004. A first version was released in 2007. The game was often on IndieDB Top100 for awhile, and was named best top 100 game in 2014 by IndieDB. The soundtrack from the game is available for free here. The game is entirely open source: the source code is available here for others to study and use. Contribute: We welcome any help and look forward to collaboration! We are looking for: A lot of people are interested in improved graphics and UI, new enemies and items to make this game a true classic. The game itself is well written and very stable, but we need help from someone with the programming experience to continue making this game a complete classic. We aim for releasing the game in about a year. Feel free to contact us at monstermelee@epinna.com if
