It's free to play, but not everyone will like this game. Pampers Online doesn't give players a lot of choices. Survival depends on finding and gathering enough food. RPG elements include unlocking new guilds and a database of past guilds in which you can be promoted to by completing daily tasks and missions. Make sure you save when you enter a new guild because many are fully automated. The voice acting is hilarious and not too in-your-face, but the lack of personality or a single voice actor doesn't bother me. If you're expecting a completely new experience, you can imagine that Pampers Online is your generic MMO clone. While this is a fun game, it's not unique. It's just more FarmVille than anything else. It's comfortable and familiar. The game is developed by Smart2Play. It has in-game items which can be bought with real money using a virtual coin system. However, any progress that a player has made in the game cannot be lost because coins are awarded for player activity, i.e. winning a match, completing an objective etc. The game allows players to create their own species, and can share it with the world, being the first server-side designer implemented into the game. The species list has over 50 pages, which can be accessed from the dropdown menu on the left-hand side of the screen. The player can then add the species to their own list, and then share it with other players in order to make it easier for them to create their own species. Players can also share character names with their friends who are creating a new species, and can earn money by selling their species.
